

Founded in 2015 by Eric Vialatel, the festival of the gaze offers a dive in the heart of the intimate and autofiction by presenting photographers authors who took their own lives as a thread of their work. Among them, a great figure of photography, the Spaniard Alberto Garcia-Alix, which we present the emblematic images, which became cults, representing an alternative world marked by death and poetry, love and despair. The exhibition opens with his famous self-portrait entitled "My female side". The self-portrait, Jen Davis did the heart of his work. Suffering from obesity since an early age, she photographed for eleven years to better accept her body. It is also through the self-portrait that the Canadian Kourtney Roy records the trace of his presence in the world. Like a heroin of the big screen, it is body with the decor. The places, the spaces, are all sources of inspiration, as well as the American Eva Rubinstein. But unlike the young flamboyant artist, the photographer of eighty-eight years prefers the silence of the black and white and the darkness of the interiors where wander with thanks thanks to the anonymous actors of his intimate life.
